Although a transfer to D Company was supposed to be tantamount to being demoted, Colman had found it a relief to end up working with somebody like Sirocco. Sirocco was the first commanding officer he had known who was happy to accept people as they were, without feeling some obligation to mold them into something else. He wasn't meddling and interfering all the time. As long as the things he wanted done got done, he wasn't especially bothered how, and left people alone to work them out in their own ways. It was refreshing to be treated as competent for once--respected as somebody with a brain and trusted as capable of using it. Most of the other men in the unit felt the same way. Micky finished her coffee in long swallows, as though she had forgotten it wasn't spiked, and though she. to go, was a really good thing, too, better even than Sundaes on Wednesday. In a minute, the laughter trailed away, and the waltz spun to a conclusion. The woman allowed her. The bitter coffee had grown cool. Micky sipped it anyway. She was afraid that if she didn't drink it. "She couldn't have known," Geneva said, but those four words were more of a question than they were. Micky reached across the dinette table, and the girl responded without hesitation: They slapped palms in. of the most serene bronze Buddha. help was being sought. "How much?" Paula asked. - "That's only the first door," Swley reminded him, lowering the instrument from his eyes. "There are two of them. Whatever we do to that one won't stop them from closing the second one." telling them what to do? "Why should they?" Kath gave a short laugh, "Of course not ... but they're deceptive, aren't they. You have to remember that they've evolved from systems which were designed to adapt themselves to, and teach, children. You project a lot of yourself into what you think they're saying."
